Snowflake

Author's Notes:
Day four of the thirty day drabble challenge!

Two boys shivered side-by-side at the bus stop. They could have dressed warmer, but come on, did Jimi Hendrix wear a parka?

Alex didn't mind much, anyway. Something about standing next to Geddy made him feel all warm inside. He didn't like to think about why.

He looked over at his quiet, gentle friend. At that moment, the clouds above them granted him a gift. The first snowflake of the winter floated down from the skies and landed on Geddy's eyebrow. Suddenly, Alex could imagine himself holding him and kissing it away. Well, at least he understood his feelings now.
